The Senate Foreign Relations Committee will lose no time in asking some questions about the world crisis as it has developed since Congress adjourned.

The panel has scheduled a closed session next Monday with Secretary of State Dean Rusk.

It underlines both the urgency of the world picture, and the dissatisfaction some feel with certain aspects of it.

Sen. J. William Fulbright of Arkansas, chairman of the Foreign Relations Committee, said his group also will get briefings later this month from Secretary of Defense Robert S. McNamara and John A. McCone, the new head of the Central Intelligence Agency.

Interest now is heightened by criticism within the committee of U. S. support of the U. N. military action against Katanga in the Congo. Also, President Kennedy's request for congressional approval of purchase of up to $100 million of U. N. bonds to settle its money pains has drawn stout criticism from some senators.
